For instance, the SDG 1 – No Poverty is directly linked with the RSPs core vision and approach. The main objective of the work RSPs do is to alleviate poverty in the country and bring poor people out of the poverty trap. Similarly, through various interventions the RSPs are working towards providing quality education, health facilities, as well as water and sanitation to the community members. All of the efforts thus contribute towards the SDGs.

Remarks by Esteemed Guests

His Excellency, Mr. Jean-François Cautain, Ambassador of the European Union to Pakistan expressed his pleasure to be present at the convention. He stated that the 2030 agenda for attaining SDGs taken on by the UN in September 2015 is the international community’s retort to global challenges. The trends regarding sustainable development and the advancement from the MDGs to the SDGs is mirrored through the change in approach to global development.

Furthermore, he said that the EU is a leading support to Civil Society Organisations (CSOs) in Pakistan. Mr. Jean-François expressed, “We believe that sustainable development can only happen if communities at community level are taking charge of their own development, because only strong and well organised communities can demand quality services from the government and make officials accountable.”

He said that the work being done by RSPs is harnessing the potential of people. In this regard, he shared that, “In the last two years, I have been visiting the rural communities of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Sindh and Balochistan. I have witnessed that the RSPs work has unleashed the potentials of communities to undertake development initiatives impacting their lives.”

After this, Mr. Paul Dudley, Senior Adviser on SDGs to UN Resident Coordinator, in his speech focused on the United Nation Development Programme’s strategy for SDGs. He said that the UN’s support to countries in case of attaining the SDGs will accentuate the basic element that includes stronger institutions, more resilient societies, and the specific but connected objectives included in the 2030 Agenda and the specific SDGs.

He said, “Pakistan’s experience with Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) served as a lesson well learnt. Pakistan was a slow starter to initiate implementation of MDGs and, as a result, missed most of the MDG targets. One of the core lessons learned from the MDGs was the lack of ownership of MDGs at the provincial and district levels.” However, in case of SDGs, Paul believed, “No country will achieve SDGs by itself; mobilisation of resources at local level is indispensable for it.” He said that Pakistan has been an early starter to initiate work on SDGs and the Government of Pakistan determination to achieve the SDGs is apparent. He informed that the UN in Pakistan stands united together in supporting the Government of Pakistan to achieve the SDG goals.

He also said that it was heartening to see how LSOs are linking their outputs and outcomes with. He further underscored that the capacity building and social mobilisation at local level will be highly useful for achieving SDGs.

He concluded on praising the work of RSPN and thanked RSPN for instigating such wonderful effort to bring together a wide array of stakeholders for a serious dialogue on the role of communities and local organizations in achieving the SDG agenda.

Ms. Marvi Memon, MNA and Chairperson, BISP, was the next to address the participants. Ms. Memon expressed that it was an absolute privilege to be present at LSO Convention. She applauded the work of two gurus Mr. Sartaj Aziz and Mr. Shoaib Sultan Khan. Moreover, Ms. Marvi believed that SDGs are now a household level concept. She appreciated the work of LSOs and expressed her happiness over their achievements. She said that this network is based on the principle of empowerment and communities’, particularly for women, financial inclusion is the key to sustainable development.

As the Chief Guest of the convention, Mr. Sartaj Aziz, Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission of Pakistan, was called upon stage to share his valuable thoughts. Mr. Aziz viewed that SDGs can be achieved through mutual efforts. For this, he said, “It is very important to translate the national goals into provincial goals and then to local goals. If we will be able to do this, this will be an exemplary contribution for other nations.” He further said that, given the capacity constraints in the local governments, massive efforts are required from LSOs to strengthen service delivery of the local governments. Moreover, he said that the lessons learnt from MDGs must be applied in future.
He expressed that this national convention of LSOs offers a distinctive occasion for LSOs to make their voice heard, to endorse the significance of localization of the new targets, and to position local government as a key partner in the implementation of SDGs.
