TRDP's community initiatives based on small infrastructure projects providing access to clean drinking water and empowering communities

By Zia Qureshi

KARACHI: In remote and rural areas of Dadu and Jamshoro districts, poor communities are joining hands to build small schemes pertaining to drinking water, drainage, and sanitation, culverts, and brick pavement in village streets. Such schemes have been completed in the short period of one year only aiming at benefitive more than 400,000 people.

In this regard, some 25,000 poor villagers worked on the schemes which contributed their labor share of PKR 26 million while Thardeep Rural Development Program (TRDP) provided financial support of PKR 300 million to community-led village organizations to build the schemes under this landmark project funded by the European Union.

Without involving costly contractors, the community village organizations with support of engineers from TRDP undertook the entire project of planning, designing, and executing the schemes. This participatory process involved identification of need for the specific scheme. The community women undertook assessments to decide about which schemes were needed and felt they needed. The needs thus collected were then enlisted in village development plans which village organizations designed with specifications of scheme and details of work plan and budget. The village organizations shared the plans with TRDP selecting technical and financial organizations with strong contribution from the village-based organizations.

Thardeep has been imparting training to community women volunteers about the importance of sanitation and hygiene. The volunteers then conduct sessions and raise awareness in their respective communities on sanitation, health, and hygiene. Having water at their doorsteps saves time of village women to actively participate in such sessions and start small enterprises within their homes.

The community volunteers have also rehabilitated non-functioning schemes which were provided by Government. Most such schemes were run on diesel engines, and lack of a system for paying bills for diesel was the main cause. The community volunteers switched the schemes to solar energy and made use of them.

Hundreds of poor households have also set up small farms taking advantage of the availability of water. They sell vegetables using the link roads built by village organizations connecting their villages with the main roads and town markets has brought much needed prosperity and empowerment to the communities.

During the lockdown, the vegetables grown at the small community farms were the main source of supply for many towns and this vital supply helped greatly in preventing food scarcity and malnourishment in a number of communities.
